UNDER BASES (UB)

STANDARD UB

This under base technique is used most often when printing on light and dark garments. A thin layer of ink (typically white) is laid down beneath the overall design and acts like a primer. The second coat is then applied on top of the underbase to create the desired look/color. Using Target's Standard UB is by far the most accurate way to assure PMS colors are matched accurately. Use of a Standard UB adds weight and more of a plastic feel to any design. When using a standard under base finished prints will most accurately match the coated PMS colors as opposed the uncoated PMS colors.

Add to Run Charge ADD
STANDARD UB Add 1 Color

NO UB

White and from time-to-time certain light garments require no under base. Similar to painting a white wall there is no need to lay down an under base as nearly all colors are not affected by white or very light garments showing through. The finished hand of the garment will be very soft and in some cases it might feel like the ink was actually dyed into the garment. On darker garments to get a very soft hand it is possible to use no underbase, however getting accurate PMS colors is all but impossible as the garment color can and often will have a dramatic effect on the finished product.

NO UB No Charge

DISCHARGE UB (100% COTTON GARMENTS ONLY)

Discharge under base is great for projects that are being printed on 100% Cotton, dark and some light garments. Instead of using a thin layer of ink, which acts like the primer, we instead add to the ink a discharge additive that extracts the dye from the garment. Most often this additive will contain a small amount of white ink. The combination of the discharge additive and the light white ink creates a super soft underbase, which is then overprinted with the chosen PMS color. The result is a very soft hand to the finished product on dark and light garments. Colors will not be as vibrant when using a discharge under base and will typically have a dull matte finish as opposed to a glossy plastic finish.

DYNO GREY UB

Dyno grey is used on 100% polyester garments to prevent dye migration and hold color vibrancy. Dyno grey is printed on an additional screen with a standard underbase printed on top. The additional layer of ink can make imprints feel thick.
